Helps a lot with total surveillance too. Add in cctvs, ring cameras, financial tracking. Not cool.

The issue, if I understand correctly, that all your online presence is tied together in one database without your consent. And it goes beyond Google too. Or it is something else? I only could read author's comments. I do not know the original language in screenshots.

Summary:

The data is available on the internet, but scattered; Google's AI collects it, links it together, and turns it into a single profile — while they deny that any personal results list exists at all.

The AI has free rein: while the official privacy tool claims that 'everything is clean', the AI Overview in Google Search freely accesses these background data points, links them to online aliases, and generates a public profile at the top of the search results. The biggest problem is that Google's privacy system is 'blind' to its own AI. This removes control from the user: you cannot request deletion of something that Google's official interface denies even exists. This is not a simple bug — it is deliberate user deception and a serious GDPR violation by a major tech company.

They will never admit it, and will use loopholes and lobbying to keep doing it. The best way is not to have any online presence it seems.

1 Stay on Topic
2 Respect and Reddiquette
3 Spam or Marketing
4 Low Quality Discussion or sh*tposts
5 No First Party Google Hosted Links (AMP/Youtube/Google)
6 Unfounded allegations & accusations are not allowed
7 Avoid closed-source and centralized software
8 Don't post blacklisted links
9 ROM question not in Megathread
10 Low Effort
11 No Duplicate Posts
12 Disclose AI Generated Content
13 No Affiliate Links

OUR SISTER SUBS

That's exactly why this matters: GDPR does not allow companies to avoid responsibility just because users exist online. Public data does not give Google the right to aggregate, profile, and generate new personal data. This is not about 'having no online presence' — it's about a system performing personal-data processing while denying it exists.

All of my posts were removed, not just hidden. I am recording the evidence on video and will upload it publicly soon. Everything is archived, so it cannot be erased.
